Forecast For Northeast England
Issued by Met Office Exeter
at 1600 on Wednesday 27 Jan 2021

++ Valid for broadcast between 1800 and 0600

Headline:
Turning wet overnight with heavy hill snow, probably disruptive.

This Evening and Tonight:
Cloudy and misty with a slow thaw of lying snow. Rain is expected to spread from the southwest around midnight, and this will fall as snow across higher ground, with significant accumulations likely. Minimum temperature 0 deg C (32 deg F).

Thursday:
The rain and snow will affect all areas. Some significant snowfall in some areas, mainly affecting higher ground. Turning drier later in the day but remaining cold. More rain overnight. Maximum temperature 5 deg C (41 deg F).

Outlook for Friday to Sunday:
Rain and some snow on Friday, turning showery overnight. Saturday drier, bright and breezy. Feeling cold. Sunday similar with bright or sunny spells. Rain and snow might arrive later.

(C) Crown Copyright 2021. Published by the Met Office.